Márcia Vilarigues is a Conservation Scientist, Assistant Professor with Habilitation and Head of the Conservation Department at FCT NOVA. She is also the Director of the Research Unit VICARTE (Glass and Ceramic for the Arts). She works in the field of Conservation and Restoration of Cultural Heritage in the area of Technical Art History and Materials Degradation. Her motivation for the research is to preserve our material cultural history and enrich the knowledge of our shared past through the history of objects. As a team member of several European projects, she is researching craft skills heritage and their preservation.
